VIRGINIA AT WORLD'S FAIR

Exhibits of Old Dominion Rank First Among Those at the Great Exposition.

DESCRIPTION BY MR. MURRELL

Visitors Declare Displays to be Prettiest Things They Have Seen in the Buildings.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.) ST. LOUIS, July 29.—In the character and presentation of her exhibits at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, Virginia has gone to the front with a suddenness that is all the more impressive when compared with her efforts at previous expositions. At the Columbian Exposition, with the exception of a small mineral exhibit, her industrial display was farcial; whereas at St. Leuis no State with the same appropriation equals her showing in the departments in which she enters and in the artistic arrangements of her products.

There is no State at the exposition regardless of annopriation, that excels her, and it is common with visitors, upon viewing Virginia exhibits to exclaim, "This is the prettiest thing I have seen in the building."

A pricultive Table 1.

"This is the prettiest thing I have seen in the building."

Agriculture Exhibit.

The agriculture exhibit, following a Moorish style of architecture, presents a large central pavilion surrounded by eight subsidiary domes. Using a blue ground the artist has wrought an effective harmony of decorations with peanuts, corn, tobacco, cotton and various grains and grasses, carrying the scheme onto the dividing partition separating. Virginia and Kentucky, and surmounting this latter with an immense State seal worked out entirely in field products. The central pavilion is given over to a peanut display. This exhibit presents not only the different brands of nuts, but also shows the various, uses to which peanuts are put, and together with the nuts used for decorative curtains and other effects, shows several tong of this product.

The lesser pavilions show special ex-other effects, shows several tons of this product.

The lesser pavillons show special exhibits, one being an exhibit of fifty or more varieties of cow neas, being the most complete pea exhibit made by any firm at the fair. In an adjoining pavillon their various brands of champagne and wines made from the scuppernong grape, are shown, while particularly unique is a pickle exhibit in which is shown pictures of famous characters and events, and a great variety of flowers, all worked out in vegetable pickles; altogether making the pickle feature of the exposition.

The remaining five pavilipns exhibit grain form, nearly every section of the State, while on the counters before them is shown part of the thousand bushel corn display that Virginia brought to show her western sisters her abilities in this line.

Large cotton bales from Southampton said by the leading thread-makers to be the peer of any grown for their purpose. A display of forage plants and sheaf grain, together with a series of beautiful transparencies illustrating the agricultural industries of the State fairly describe the leading features of this space.

space.

Just across the aisle is Virginia's special tobacco exhibit, the central feature of which is a twenty foot statue, representing an Indian girl clothed in obacco with right arm extended, holding in her hand, a bundle of tobacco leaves Grouped around the base of this figure are cases containing exhibits of leaf and manufac-tured tobacco from the different markets of the State.

Horticulture Exhibit.

Horticultine Exhibit.

In the horticultural bullding, Virginia has a very attractive installation occupying blocks 32 and 33. In the one instance the treatment consisting of an immense connecept from which apples are presented by illusion as continually pouring on to the pyramidal pile below, and in the other by light pavilions joined by grill work, and festooned with grape vines, below which are hung transparencies illustrating orchard scenes, and on the tables of which are displayed six hundred plates of apples and other fruits for the replenishing of which between 800 and 900 barrels of Virginia fruit were placed in the St. Louis cold storages.

Fish, Forestry and Game.

Fish, Forestry and Game. In the forestry, fish and game build-ing, Virginia has one of the best ex-hibits shown, starting with an attractive hibbits shown, starting with an attractive installation in a brown color acheme worked out with fine cones, gun bales, and sea shells, framing en immense picture of Hampton Roads with the Chamberlin Hotel in the foreground. The site of the coming Jamestown Exposition, and Norfolk in the background are effective settings providing for showing a very complete exhibit of mounted game, birds, waterfowl and animals, while the exhibit of shell fish, consisting of composition models in consisting of composition models in natural shells showing types of oysters and clams from all the leading coves of the Chesapeake, is said by experts to be the finest exhibit of this character yet made.

Mines and Metallurgy. Mines and Nictainingy.
Virginia's mineral display is not only one of the best of her series, but is also one of the most striking of the Palace of Mines and Metallurgy. Following designs drawn by W. L. Shep-Palace of Mines and Metallurgy. Fol-lowing designs drawn by W. L. Shep-pard, the Richmond artist, this exhibit presents a messive towered archway con-simented of copper ores from Bucklagham and Hallfax, gypsum and coal from Wise-and Washington countles. As a center-piece for the vista of this archway is a tableau representing King Coal and his two guards. Extending on either side of the main archway, a partition, the pillars of which are capped with onyx, with the remainder constructed of slate, comprises the exhibit of Buckingham county. Forming a background, exhibits of coal and coke form the frames for large pictures, while the windows above are faced with a number of large transparencies illustrative of beautiful scenery which in stupendous rock formations and softness of water and color effects so often causes vistors to say that if the beauties of Virginia scenery were as well known to the traveling public as they should be, many a tourist would change his plans and visit this State instead of going clsewhere.

Filling in the remaining space are stands and cases showing beautiful marbles, a great variety of copper ores, consisting in part of tale, clays, galena, zinc, asbestos, gold, barytes, etc., etc., while this exhibit is very handsome in its general effect, it is particularly valuable in that the cres shown are practically representative of deposits in commercical quantities and offer a tempting field for the mining investor.

ing field for the mining investor,

The State Building. Finally in her State Building. Virginia in the reproduction of Monticello, has a structure that bears creditable companion with that of any State, and in its homelike effect and histeric interest, is one of the most attractive at the exposition, so that the visitor to the great fair who is not favorably impressed with Virginia is not favorably impressed with Virginia and her showing, is, indeed, hard to Repairing the Cable.

Repairing the Cable.

For more than three days employes of the Bell Telephone Company have been at work in a manhote on North Dighth Street, near the Richmond Transfer Company's stables, and they were still working 'yesterday. One man is kept constantly pumping fresh air isto the manhole where a wire expert is at work, this being done to protect him from any-danger of being overcome by sewer sas. These men are engaged in repairing the cable of the telephone company, which recently became water-soaked and put all the 'phones reached by these wares out of commission.

GIANTESSFLEESFOR FEAR OF BROTHER

Niece of Lark McCoy, Feudist, Notified She Would be Killed if She Returned Home.

WHEELING, W. VA., July 29.-Miss Martha Daniels, a niece of Lark McCoy, leader of the McCoy faction in the memorable mountain feud with the Hatfields , is in hiding at oRanoke, Va., where she lives, in the fear that if she returns to her home, on the Tug River, her two brothers will carry into exe-cution their threat to kill her. She is twenty-five years old, large and attrac-tive, a vertable Amazon in appearance. twenty-five years one, large and attractive, a veritable Amazon in appearance.
About two weeks ago her mother sold a tract of land, against the protests of her two sons. A few days ago the sons. Perry and Wilson, went to the home of their mother, from whom they have been extranged for some time. Martha was felled with a chair and two ribs were broken. The mother escaped and rowed across the Tug River, leaving Martha for the found no skiff, but swam the river.

Mrs. Daniels managed to escape to the mountains. Then the sons fled, and Martha lost no time in leaving the State, after she had been notified that she would be killed on signt.

Miss Daniels and her mother met in the mountains of West Virginia, and Martha had warrants issued for the arrest of her brothers. She will remain in Roanoke until they are caught and are safely behind the bars.

Short Talks On Advertising

No. 30.

American advertising is one of the greatest forces that has helped to make America. It has been a means of bringing the American people as it were into one great market place, and has created an enormous field for all sorts of opportunities and new business. Now American advertising has begun to revolutionize London retailing, just as American machinery has revolutionized English manufacturing. The stores that use modern advertising in London are crowded to everflowing, so are the stores in Richmond that use Tee-Dee Wants.

The reason is the same in both cases. The advertising reaches the people who can and will make advertising profitable. Tee-Dee Wants are one of the great business forces in Richmond. Try them and see
